

ALEXANDRA ROSE RIEGER

in Charlie Wilson's War

Alexandra will be seen in "Charlie Wilson's War" in a small featured role portraying a village girl in the scene where Tom Hanks first lands in Afghanistan. She will depict Sharbat Gula, an Afghan village girl made famous by her haunting eyes in National Geographic Magazine Cover in 1985. "The versatility of roles she can play is impressive, I am glad she could be a part of the film," commented Mike Nichols, director of the film. Cinematographer, Stephen Goldblatt said "Alexandra's look is as compelling as her acting."

Here are some shots from the film:

Alexandra pictured with the original "Charlie" referenced to in 'Charlie's Angels'

Pictured here with friend from Afghanistan who is also in film.

A quick pic of Tom Hanks on set of Charlie Wilson's War

Scene from the film in front of the tent. "The set was actually true to the settings in Afghanistan!"

Scenes from the set. Depicting a refugee

Charlie Wilson's War Dramatic Picture